Required optical alignments after optical assembly replacement

This bulletin provides information about the optical alignments required after an optical assembly replacement or when doing preventative maintenance.

If an optical assembly is replaced for any reason in an RGB projector or when doing preventative maintenance, the projector's Service Manual must be reviewed for all associated instructions for proper part replacement along with the alignments required after the part replacement. Optical assembly replacements may require alignment to be made after replacement due to a slight misalignment from the previous assembly configuration.

Failing to perform proper optical alignments after a part replacement could lead to reduced brightness and/or damaging internal projector components. If damage in the projector is caused due to failed optical alignments after part installation, any failures associated are not covered under warranty.
